

The Anarchists to Hang.

The United States Supreme Court having decided the jury law of Illinois to be constitutional, and refused a writ of error in the case of the Chicago anarchists, nothing now remains but to carry out the just sentence of death imposed upon them. It is hardly to be supposed that any very serious difficulty will occur in carrying the law into execution. The State authorities have been very thoroughly forewarned, and therefore may be expected to be forearmed. They may be trusted to see well to it that everything is carried out decently and in order, and that nothing approaching to a riot will be tolerated. Of the righteousness of the sentence there can be no manner of doubt. Two of the convicted men were proved to have actively participated in the firing of the bomb which killed the police and the others, by violent harangues and prior plotting, urged, aided and abetted what was done. The execution of the guilty men, unhappy as its necessity is, will strengthen the cause of law and order, and will do much to increase respect, both at home and abroad, for the form of government under which we live. There were those who predicted that our State institutions would not prove strong enough for violent and criminal agitations having, or pretending to have, the redress of political grievances for their object. But the result proves that a popular government, founded on the confidence of the governed, so far from being weaker, is actually stronger to suppress violent agitators than are the so-called strong governments of Europe. It is well that an appeal was taken to the highest appellate court in the land. An authoritative and final decision has been reached that the law, as it stands, is all-sufficient, and that its enforcement is adequate to the preservation of order. It is also noteworthy that the conduct of the Judge before whom the prisoners were tried, convicted and sentenced has been exceptionally approved by his fellow citizens. He has just been re-nominated for a further term by all political parties, including the labor party. It will be henceforth understood that neither violence nor anarchy will accomplish political results in this country.—S. P. News Letter.

Going to Night Quarters.

The operation known as "going to night quarters" consists in preparing a ship for immediate action, and the celerity with which it can be carried out is so extraordinary as to be almost incredible. It is nearly midnight, the flagship is plowing her way across the calm sea, and the regular thumping of her screw is almost the only noise that is audible on board of her. The officer of the watch passes like a shadow backwards and forwards along the bridge. On the poop the marine sentry and a few ghastly-looking signalmen move silently hither and thither. A light shines from the skylight of the Admiral's cabin; but if you look down you may see the Admiral asleep in his arm chair, with a book upon his knees. On the dimly-lighted main deck there is a steady murmur caused by the concert of several hundred snoring, and the officers, like the blue-jackets and marines, are in the arms of Morpheus. But, unfortunately for the peace of the ship, the Admiral has given orders that he is to be called at midnight, and shortly before that hour the little midshipman of the watch steals softly below and wakes the flag-lieutenant, who, in his turn, wakes the Admiral. Then the Admiral suddenly appears on the poop, followed by a few heavily-coated subordinates, and the order is given. In an instant the ship, from stem to stern, leaps from sleep. Men drop from their hammocks, and partially dress themselves with a haste which could scarcely be exceeded were their lives in jeopardy. The hammocks, which interfere with the fighting arrangements, are lashed up, and are placed in the upper deck abreast of the proper nettings, and ready to be stowed and covered. All lights which show outside the ship are extinguished, and the fighting lanterns are lighted. Electric search lights are got ready for use. All water-tight doors are closed, the magazines are opened and lighted, fire-engines and hoses are prepared, and the guns are cleared away and made ready for action. When a ship is over ten thousand tons' displacement, has a complement of more than seven hundred men, and carries a number of guns, the operation of going to night quarters involves an amount of work and bustle which might well make a civilian despair of accomplishing the business in a day. Yet, in five minutes and a half after the giving of the order, an officer reports that the guns are clear, and that, in fact, the ship is, in all respects, ready for action.—E.

An editor, with an eye to payment of what he sells, indulges in this little bit of philosophy: Every man ought to pay his debts, if he can. Every man ought to get married, if he can. Every man ought to do his work to suit his customers, if he can. Every wife should hold her tongue, if she can. Every lawyer should occasionally tell the truth, if he can. Every man ought to mind his own business, and let other people's alone, if he can. Every man should take a newspaper, and pay for it anyhow.

A telephone clerk says that no woman ever answers a call by telephone without smoothing down her hair, working up a smile, and trying to make a good impression on the transmitter.

The woman who paints her face is naturally ashamed of her cheek.
